Ways to help out at home

- Ask your child to read to you every day. Give them time to correct themselves if they make a mistake before you help them.
- Talk about what they read. Ask questions (Who? Why? Where?) and have a conversation about it. (Do you think that X should have done that? What do you think will happen next?)
- You could take turns reading. Tag team! You read a page and then your child reads a page.
- Pick a book that is a little too difficult for your child to read independently and then read it to them so they can hear what good reading sounds like and pick up on some amazing new vocabulary. Challenged them to use it in their conversations and writing at school!
